

UGAT: THE ORIGIN OF ANGONO

A Proposed Multi Disciplinary Art Hub for Angono Rizal

An Art Hub is not just a building that holds art, its a space that makes a memory, a place to hone creativity and an unforgettable experience of camaradery. This proposal designs the Angono Art Hub as a living tree rooted in ancestral myth, growing through history, and branching toward the cultural future of the Art Capital of the Philippines.

Angono Rizal is born with rich artistic identity, the murals on the walls, the festivals, the ancient petroglyphs, the national artists and the beautiful scenery of mountains and lakes, yet sadly it is slowly forgotten. Few people knows it, few people appreciates it. So as an Architect, it is my task to bridge the gap between public appreciation and private act of creation. It is my task to listen what the land, the myths, and the people are already saying, and give that voice a form.

Have you ever wondered what would it feel to explore and enter the parts of a tree? If no, in this design, the Multi Disciplinary Art Hub is to integrate its spaces as parts of the tree. I placed the art hub near the lakefront of Angono and surrounded it with greenery and water elements to create a peaceful environment that also serves as the outdoor garden. Upon entering, visitors are welcomed by a huge dwarf statue that serves as a focal point on the entrance representing the "nuno sa punso", symbolizing the guardian of the Art Hub. I designed the entrance as the roots of the tree, using dim lighting, reflective pools, and stone pathway to introduce the myths and cultural beliefs of Angono.

As visitors move upward the trunk, they experience Artist workshops with galleries that showcases the history and culture of the Angono. Visitors can also enjoy an ^{open} pantry near a cozy lounge. What's unique about this is, the lights are designed to immitate fireflies that also lights up the place. the ^{artist} workshop is designed with a material such as rammed earth walls, bamboo screens and waven panels to create warm and natural atmosphere inspired with filipino craftsmanship.

Moving on, the most exciting part of the museum is the spaces on the branch of the Art Hub, this is the 3rd floor of the building. In here, spaces such as Seminar Collab Zone, Permanent Hall and Seasonal Exhibition Hall is located in this area. It is divided into 3 branches, this floor has elevated pathways leads visitors into different spaces. I want visitors to feel as they were climbing through a living tree while discovering new stories and artworks in every space,

Lastly, at the highest point of the Museum, visitors reach a panoramic viewing deck overlooking at Tagund de Bay, symbolizing reflecting growth and future of Angono.

Through this design, the Art hub or the living tree of Angono, I want to create an experience where, architecture, mythology, history and nature come together to preserve the cultural identity of Angono for future generations.
